Alexander Sutherland Neill, founder and head of Summerhill Freedom School

<http://www.eafa.org.uk/catalogue/205532#.TxqeZj-tQSa.facebook>

Scenes of pupil activity; chatting, attending art classes, climbing trees, eating lunch, and playing in the school grounds, a testament to the freedom the pupils endure, are intercut with commentary from Founder and Headmaster, Alexander Neill. Denouncing the fundamental principles that govern the pupils of Summerhill Freedom School, Mr. Neill contemplates the reasoning behind the school's libertarian ethos. Mr. Neill champions the school's alumni of lawyers and doctors, hailing his schooling methods a great success. Mr. Neill explains the school's self-governing practices and we witness a meeting where a pupil puts forward a new law. His personal opinion about parental control and behaviour management, and the standard school curriculum are given. The credits roll to the sound of pupils performing the folk song "where have all the flowers gone?".

- Film su Summerhill prodotto dalla BBC: ne esistono brani in YouTube che, se associati in sequenza, lo ricompongono. Il film tratta in forma fantasiosa (per adattarsi ad un pubblico bambino) di storie vere. In particolare racconta di quando la scuola venne inquisita dall'Ofsted per essere demolita nella sua fama; il giudice dette però ragione ai "Summerhillians", aprendo così una nuova pagina di storia: l'educazione scolastica tradizionale non può essere obbligatoria.
